Robert Burns was born in 1759 near Ayr in southwest Scotland. His parents were farmers. Little Robert worked on the farm too, but he preferred reading to farming. There are people who think this is a separate language and others say this is a dialect of English. Burns did not only write poems about Scotland, but also loved poems. His "Auld Lang Syne" (meaning "a long time ago") is one of the best-known songs in English-speaking countries. It is almost a tradition to sing this song at the start of a New Year. Hi Steven

Here's a brief note from my trip to Great Britain. My school friend Anne and her family invited me for dinner last night. Her husband, Paul, seems very shy and doesn't laugh much. But he was very friendly to me. I loved her little niece, Jill - she's really funny - not like her mother. She's like her father, Peter, who is very easy-going. I thought Jonny, Anne's nephew, was very arrogant, but he seems quite talented. He writes poems and he's only 15. I think he knows how clever he is and he likes to show it. Next week I'm going to the theatre with Anne to see "Macbeth" - I think it'll be really exciting. My first English play, live in England.

Lees de tekst goed door en kruis het juiste antwoord aan.

We asked our readers what they think about the new restaurant in our town and here is one opinion: "I agree with the readers who said it wasn't cheap, but what do you expect - it's not fast food. The food is served cafeteria style and you have to stand in line for quite a long time. They serve good home-made food and the service is extremely pleasant. The food is cooked fresh and so of course you have to wait for it. I find the food absolutely delicious, but portions are small. I think for authentic cooking it can become the place to go with a lot of different dishes to try."
